00:51:47 - Sally Perkins: - I wonder if the City of Tacoma is actually working on changes to the City's camping ban but behind the scenes...they are awfully quiet about what they plan to do about the loss of shelter beds and the shifts in where the camping ban as currently designed is going to be active...

This could help explain recent housing amendments put forth by two CMs. That never made it to study session after plan adoption was postponed a week to do so. 00:57:56 - Sally Perkins: - Replying to "I wonder if the City..."

Good, Thanks! I have not had time to watch the video yet. My impression was that Daniels and Scott wanted to see specific actions in the plan, given teh vague and general language about housing and homelessness, which they felt would not produce action.

Depends on the zoning the mobile home park is in.

I'll add - this is a big conversation at the local and State level right now to figure out where those federal responsibilities would go if significant reductions are made to federal emergency management agencies. Unfortunately there are more questions than answers about this potential shift right now.

Exactly right, Theresa. Worth noting that it is typically significantly less expensive to buy a mobile home than to have a contractor build you a tiny house (ADU).

- 01:53:46 - Rob Huff (he/him): - For context, there has been much attention and concern about the shortfall in funding at the City of Tacoma that is leading to the closure of 150-ish shelter spaces this summer. That is due to the failure to obtain $12m in funding from the state government. What is at stake with the federal funding to the county is more in the range of $100m.
- 01:54:24 - Kerri (she/her): - We saw many orgs compartmentalize when they started to become hybrids for fundraising purposes 20 or so years ago. Can't the income producing legal entity still do this work while the nonprofit legal entity remains in fed compliance?

This is what makes social housing so important. When basic needs are controlled by the investor class, those with the fewest resources will suffer the most. We need to challenge the concept that more profit = success.

this is the clearing cost to fund a real-estate investment, insurance and clear maintenance. This is a number that basis profitability on equity and not cash flow. This is why supply is important.

02:09:02 - Theresa Power-Drutis: - SPECIAL REPORT: Chaos and Corruption

In this special edition of the Government Standard, we track the path of destruction left in the wake of President Trump's first four months in office – and highlight how AFGE and the labor movement as a whole is fighting back to secure our survival.

The first four months of President Trump's second term in office have been marked by a series of targeted and vicious attacks on the federal government – on the jobs and benefits held by 2 million civil servants, on the programs and services they deliver to Americans at home and communities in need across the globe, and on our fundamental concepts of democracy and due process.
